Questions to consider surrounding the text

Read Romans 1:16-17

1. We first and foremost always look for the context of when we are reading the Word of God. With these two verses, who is Paul talking about, meaning, who is not ashamed?
2. When reading the Word of God we have to also recognize that the Word is for a specific group of people. We know Paul is writing to the church in Rome. So with this being a letter to the church in Rome, and yet it being the Word of God. Next we have to ask, what is God trying to show us today concerning who He is and what He is calling us to do. What is God trying to show us here in verse 16?
3. Verse 17 introduces the key word righteousness or justice, which have the same root. The biblical idea of God's justice is that he will put right all the wrongs of the world. He promised to do this in a covenant he made long ago to Abraham and his family, a promise ultimately realized in Abraham's great descendant, Jesus. How does the good news about Jesus show God's justice?
4. Why might people have a view of the gospel that is opposite from Paul's view? (Consider "it is the power of God for salvation to everyone who believes"; and The righteous shall live by faith.)
