DID YOU KNOW?

If it seemed an exaggeration for Paul to say that no one seeks God, it will certainly appear outrageous for him to claim that "no one does good" (Romans 3:12).

Now, how can Paul say this? After all, many non-Christians do many good things, using their talents and wealth in ways which are kind and generous and which make the world a better place. And the Lord Jesus himself commanded us to do "good works" (Matthew 5:16).

But we need to remember what kind of "goodness" Paul is talking about here. His focus is on our relationship to God, and whether our good deeds can fix that broken relationship; whether they can establish a righteousness of our own. The teaching is that, ultimately, our good deeds cannot do anything to get us saved. In fact, they can leave us further from, not closer to, righteousness.

The Bible sees a truly good deed as being good in form and in motive. For example, if you help an old lady cross the street, that is good in form; it conforms to God's will for our behavior. But why are you helping her? If it is because it is dark on the other side and you will be able to rob her; or (less extreme, and more likely) it is because you are hoping she will give you some money in gratitude; or because you have seen a friend further down the street who you know will notice and be impressed – then your good work arises from a selfish heart and selfish motives. But a good deed in God's sight is one done for his glory, not our own (1 Corinthians 10:31).

- Timothy Keller "Romans For You."
